Many Issues

10-20% of job seekers in a coding course has a career path that does not benefit much from writing coding

Though some job seekers can succeed in a 3-month course, others need a 6-month or a longer course to be able to succeed

Some job seekers cannot succeed in any coding course on the market today, and would need a pre-coding course which does not exist as of now

Solution

A human-centred interview that answers these two, main questions about the job seeker

Can this job seeker's desired career significantly benefit from a coding course?

Can this job seeker succeed in the coding courses available on the market?
